

The Schimberg Group's Barron Schimberg Nominated for HGTV.com's Fresh Faces of Design Awards

Architect Barron Schimberg, founder of The Schimberg Group, was nominated in HGTV.com's Fresh Faces of Design Awards in the Great First Impressions category, which was one of twelve categories in the contest.

Schimberg was in competition with eleven other architects/designers from around the United States, including Arizona, California, Colorado, Florida, Nevada, New York, South Carolina and Washington.

Schimberg's project entry was "Island-inspired Beach Home," a Siesta Key residence. The Schimberg Group blended island design components like deep balconies, horizontal siding, rich wood soffits, decorative wood brackets and Bahama shutters with modern elements including oversized roof overhangs, angular lines and architectural columns reaching from ground to roof. The entry drive, topped with concrete mixed with shells, was deliberately offset to allow for a beautifully landscaped front yard. Three-foot-high tabby stone forms a base around the entire home, which is painted stark white with accents of pastel blues and greens.

About the competition, HGTV.com stated, "Tour luxurious indoor and outdoor spaces created by the nation's leading designers, then vote for your fave." Voting was open from late September through October 2015.

A panel of judges, including HGTV executives and award-winning designers, selected the overall winner of the 2015 HGTV Fresh Faces of Design Awards.
